Building Bridges: Connecting Individuals with Vital Resources and Support

School staff plays a crucial role in identifying when a student or family needs support. They are often the first to notice changes in behavior, attendance, or academic performance that may indicate a need for assistance. But often times helping connect those individuals to resources is difficult.

Across the City of Fishers, there is a dedicated effort to support the community by connecting individuals with the resources they need. In an effort to work towards our goal, the health department has hired a Social Worker and two Community Health Advocates to help identify and assess community needs. These roles work to understand the challenges and situations that community members may be facing, and then help to create connections to support networks that can provide assistance. By having staff who are trained to identify these needs and then are able to connect those individuals with resources, the community as a whole is better equipped to address issues and provide support where needed.

Overall, the city of Fishers recognizes the importance of supporting its community members. By working together and utilizing the expertise of trained professionals, individuals can get the help they need to overcome challenges and thrive. Whether it's through the school system, the health department, or other community organizations, support is available for those who need it.
